Bloody Fighting Marks Dayton Strike

Picket Lines Broken by Police Clubs

DAYTON, July 28—(AP)—Five pickets were injured today, none seriously, in a renewal of clashes between police and the picket line at the strike bound Univis Lens Co. plant.

The disorders climaxing a three-day back to work movement at the plant were described as the most violent yet.

Newsman said they saw police swing clubs to force a path through the picket line for 340 non-striking employees in the back to work movement.

Among the pickets injured was Lou Kaplan, international organizer of the CIO United Electrical Workers. Kaplan's head was covered with blood as he was led helplessly to a waiting patrol wagon.

Kaplan and four other pickets were taken to the Miami Valley Hospital. Three pickets were taken directly to police station where they were held without charge.

Injury Not Serious

Kaplan's bashed head was X-rayed at the hospital's emergency ward, but attendants reported his condition was not serious. Others taken to the hospital were listed by police as Lem Markland, Melvin and Pearl Hupman and Paul Duman. They received head injuries.

Police declared today's clash had broken the back bone of the picket line resistance to the back to work movement.

Union leaders, however, declared the pickets had not given up.

Since Monday, 19 pickets, all members of the UEW (CIO) and its Local 768, have been arrested as police details of unprecedented force have opened lanes into the plant. Some 150 policemen were on the scene today.

CIO leaders from other locals joined leaders of Local 768 in denouncing the police action.

Bill Shouts, secretary-treasurer of the Montgomery County industrial union council (CIO), said a meeting of presidents of all CIO locals will be called to discuss the situation. Newsman said they heard Jim Kraft, president of Local 755 at General Motors Delco plant, remark, "we are really going to shut it down now." He did not amplify the statement.

Six hundred persons lined the south side of Leo Street, shutting off traffic, as police clashed with the pickets around 7:30 A. M., EST. After the melee subsided, Police Capt. M. C. Kirkpatrick, blood on his shirt and one sleeve rolled up, reported the situation under control.

Police Chief R. F. Wurster, who yesterday had nearly 100 policemen on duty at the plant, said his men had been placed on two 12-hour shifts.

His action followed renewed violence along a CIO United Electrical Workers picket line yesterday when Univis employees, answering a back-to-work call by the company, tried to enter the plant.

Yesterday policemen pierced the 200-person picket line with a flying wedge. They formed a corridor through which non-striking returned to work. One employee was struck down by a picket, who managed to dodge past the police detail.

Police said stench bombs were used during yesterday's disorders. In previous disturbances, police said a chemical smelling like skunk oil had been sprayed about the picket line.

The Univis plant had been strike-bound since May 5. Last Friday, in a National Labor Relations Board election, Local 768 of the CIO United Electrical Workers union was dismissed, 302 to 272, as a bargaining agent for Univis employees.

H. H. Stanley, president of the company, has announced that any of the firm's employees not back at work by Thursday would be discharged.

Adjournment Main Goal of Special Session

Housing Problems And Inflation Curbs To Be Considered

WASHINGTON, July 28—(AP)—Senate Republicans decided today to have committees study President Truman's requests for housing and anti-inflation legislation and to make an effort to outlast the poll tax.

Chairman Millikin (R-Colo.) of the Republican conference announced the decision after an almost three-hour closed session of the Republican senators.

Millikin will consider the specific points in Mr. Truman's message to Congress yesterday.

They agreed to act, he said, on anything "of an emergency character and of national importance."

"We were agreed that we should not stay here long enough to interfere with the proper conduct of the campaign," Millikin said, but added that no adjournment time was set.

Republican leaders have laid plans for adjournment as "soon as possible"—probably next week or the week after.

Earlier, Senator Wherry (R-Nebr.), acting majority leader, said the GOP senators agreed to a 24-hour delay in any attempt to bring up the anti-poll tax bill.

And as the GOP leaders laid plans for a speedy adjournment, they announced complete willingness to let the voters decide in November whether they had done the right thing.

Democrats promptly shouted "sabotage." They accused the majority party of setting out deliberately to wreck the president's program for anti-inflation and housing legislation which he pleaded for yesterday to avert "another great depression."

Privately some Republicans questioned the wisdom of their strategy, which GOP Sen. Robertson of Wyoming said had been arrived at after consultation with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, the party's presidential nominee.

Robertson emerged from a meeting of the Senate's Republican policy committee late yesterday and told newsmen Chairman Taft of Ohio had relayed the advice from Dewey to "stay around a week or so and then go home."

This report was relayed in turn to James C. Hagerty, Dewey's press secretary, at Pawling, N. Y. Hagerty at first said Dewey had no comment but a little later announced:

"The governor feels that the Congress should stay in Washington and give careful consideration to whatever was proposed in the president's message."

Republican congressional leaders will open a broadcast bombardment tonight on President's Truman's special session program.

GOP national headquarters announced this radio lineup for tonight: (all Eastern Standard Time). 7:30 to 8 (NBC) Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the GOP Senate policy committee and Rep. Halleck of Indiana, House majority leader. 9-9:30 (mutual) Rep. Keefe of Wisconsin.

9:30 to 10 (CBS) Senator Wherry of Nebraska, acting majority leader, and Rep. Dirksen of Illinois.

House Speaker Joe Martin of Massachusetts and Senator Millikin of Colorado were scheduled for a followup broadcast Friday night over ABC.

Tabernacle Preacher Shoots Burglar

PHILADELPHIA, July 28—(AP)—While 25 parishioners were meeting in an adjoining auditorium, the pastor of a North Philadelphia church last night shot and killed a man he had surprised stealing $50 from a desk in his study, police reported.

Police identified the victim as Robert Winters, 25, and said he was killed instantly by five bullets as he tried to flee from the New Light Tabernacle Baptist Church.

The Rev. Theodore Bullock, 39, pastor of the church, told police he fired the shots from a .32 caliber pistol.

The shooting, according to police, climaxed a violent scuffle during which the intruder dropped an envelope containing the money.

German Factory Wrecked by Blast; 500 Are Killed

Mannheim in French Zone Rocked By Explosion in Chemical Plant; Flames Roar Through Wreckage

MANNHEIM, Germany, July 28—(AP)—Police said between 500 and 600 persons were killed and 1,400 injured today in an explosion and fire which wrecked the I. G. Farben chemical plant at Ludwigshafen.

The disaster in the French zone city appeared to be the greatest in Europe since the war.

Police in Mannheim, an American zone city across the Rhine from Ludwigshafen, said about 1,400 injured already have been taken to hospitals.

3,000 Are Out For Fair Opener

Judging of Exhibits Now in Full Swing

A crowd estimated at 3,000 attended the opening night of the Fayette County Fair, with indications each succeeding night will see many more on the grounds, as well as thousands each day of the fair.

Approximately 1200 persons heard and saw the WLW Midwestern Hayride, given in front of the grandstand at 8 P. M. The stand is expected to be filled each succeeding night for the pleasure of fair patrons.

Klein's Attractions, one of the best offerings of the series, is scheduled for Wednesday night at 8 P. M. The 4-H Club show and sale will feature Thursday evening for the grandstand audience, and a fireworks display will wind up the night's activities outside of the midway attractions.

Wednesday morning, judging was under way in virtually all departments, and in some classes the task was a real one.

The dairy cattle judging was done with Roy Starbuck of Wilmington in charge. The beef cattle show and judging was under way Wednesday afternoon, with J. B. McCorkle of the Angus Association in charge.

An exceptionally good racing card was on during Wednesday afternoon, and will be followed by strong turf programs each day insuring plenty of enjoyment for lovers of the sport.

By late Tuesday night virtually all displays were in place, and those not in readiness Tuesday night were placed in position Wednesday morning.

The big midway crowd lingered late Tuesday night, as it is sure to during the remaining nights of the week, and all found plenty of enjoyment in the large midway ever arranged on the Fair Grounds here.

Even the threatening storm during Tuesday night failed to reduce the crowd where the holiday spirit was so much in evidence with everyone apparently having plenty of fun on the midway.

Large numbers thronged the exhibition buildings during the evening.

Exhibits generally are unusually good, and in some classes, much of unusual interest awaits those who attend the fair.

The photographic exhibit is attracting a great deal of attention, as well as the needlework (Please Turn to Page Two)

Old Taxi is 'Home' for Family Following Veteran's Eviction

CLEVELAND, July 28—(AP)—Taxicab driver Stephen A. Cepec is getting tired of spending 18 to 20 hours a day sitting behind a steering wheel.

The 32-year-old army veteran and his family of three young children were evicted from his one-room housekeeping unit seven weeks ago. Since that time the five Cepecs have been "at home" in their 12-year-old sedan.

One daughter, Marlene, 7, has been in a camp for diabetic children for the last month, but she is due "home" Sunday.

That was what worried Cepec today.

"We can stand it," he said, while continuing his search for quarters, "but what bothers us is our living like this and having Marlene coming home."

The plant employed from 6,000 to 7,000 chemical workers and comprised several buildings sprawled over a wide area.

Flames roared through the plant, preventing firemen from getting anywhere near enough to make an exact estimate of casualties.

"From my window here in Mannheim, the smoke cloud over the plant seems to be about a half mile square," the American official said.

"Several buildings apparently have blown up, but it is impossible to tell definitely because the smoke obscures everything."

The plant and its numerous buildings employ between 6,000 and 7,000 persons in manufacturing chemicals of various types. The main building was a six-story structure.

One could only guess how many fell victims or escaped. The force of the explosion and the scope of the fire convinced authorities the toll will be high.

The first explosion shot a column of flame two miles high, witnesses reported.

French officials on the scene reported to U. S. military government men here that the explosion occurred in a structure known as the "Nitrate Building."

"Flames shot two miles into the sky when the explosion took place," said an American officer in Mannheim, across the Rhine from Ludwigshafen.

Hundreds of windows in Mannheim were smashed by the concussion.

Scores of injured were rushed across the river to Mannheim, from the French to the American zone.

Doctors in Mannheim City Hospital said "the hospital is full of victims." They said the other victims pouring in would have to be sent to Heidelberg.

Several telephone lines between Mannheim and Ludwigshafen were destroyed. The stricken city could not be reached from Frankfurt.

The plant was a branch of the sprawling I. G. Farbenindustrie Chemical Trust before the combine was split up by a four-power order. It was the main factory in Ludwigshafen and covered several acres.

U. S. officials here said the plant was burning furiously two hours after the explosion.

Republic Steel Report Shows Steady Income

CLEVELAND, July 28—(AP)—Net income of $16,938,390 for the first six months of 1948 was reported last night by Republic Steel Corp. for the corresponding period last year the figure was $16,731,615. Profits per share of common stock for those periods were $2.84 in 1948 and $2.80 in 1947.

Marshall was told there was a report from London quoting a British official as saying that the western German government plan would be put in cold storage if Russia and the western powers agree to meet on the future of Germany.

Marshall said that was not his understanding and he agreed with a statement by Gen. Lucius D. Clay here last Friday that the United States, Britain and France are going ahead with their plans. The western powers hope to find out soon whether Russia really wants to negotiate an acceptable settlement of main German issues.

This is understood to be the main purpose behind the idea of having the American, British and French envoys in Moscow call on Foreign Minister Molotov—probably next weekend—for a direct discussion of the Berlin crisis.

What they find out from Molotov will go a long way toward determining whether there is any prospect for an early meeting of the big four foreign ministers council.

City Government Control Sought In Red Moves

Firm Stand Taken Against Pressure On Police Force

BERLIN, July 28—(AP)—Commandants of the western allies in Berlin today answered with a flat "no" increased Soviet pressure to destroy the blockaded city's elected government.

The three commandants sent a letter to Frau Louise Schroeder, mayor of Berlin, countermmanding two Russian orders aimed at seizing control of the city government.

U. S. Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith, who is in Berlin, may confer with Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, today, before returning to Moscow with western power proposals for settling the German crisis. Smith said he would remain in Berlin until tomorrow.

The commandants advised Mayor Schroeder that the Soviet order to fire Socialist Johannes Stum, deputy police president, was invalid. They also told her that the Soviet commandant had no authority to install Paul Letcher as deputy head of the city's food department—one of Berlin's most important offices in the present crisis.

Soviet determination to place the police department under Russian control already has created a situation in which the western allies recognize one police chief and the Russians another.

Paul Markgraf, Moscow-trained police chief, who was fired by the city government two days ago, was holding office today only by virtue of the fact that police headquarters is in the Russian sector and he enjoys Soviet support.

Disorders Break Out

Disorders broke out in the Russian sector of blockaded Berlin today when thousands of Germans jammed streets before banks in an effort to exchange their money for new Russian-sponsored currency.

Newspapers in western Berlin said the Russians and their Communist-controlled economic commission are trying "to cheat the people out of their money." The deadline for the even exchange is tonight.

The Russians through their newspapers admitted "chaos" existed, but blamed the non-Communist city government for not providing enough exchange places. American military government finance officials said this is untrue and "the Russians are trying to make the city government a scapegoat for their own mistake."

ALLIES PLAN FUTURE

WASHINGTON, July 28—(AP)—Secretary Marshall said today the United States has agreed with the British and French on next moves in dealing with the crisis of Soviet—blockaded Berlin.

Marshall declined at a news conference to disclose any point of the agreement.

He said, however, that some reports from abroad purporting to set forth details are incorrect.

One question on which he was specific is that the western powers intend to go forward on schedule with their plan for setting up a separate government in western Germany.

Marshall was told there was a report from London quoting a British official as saying that the western German government plan would be put in cold storage if Russia and the western powers agree to meet on the future of Germany.

Marshall said that was not his understanding and he agreed with a statement by Gen. Lucius D. Clay here last Friday that the United States, Britain and France are going ahead with their plans. ## Meanderings

By Wash Fayette

A man who has traveled considerably in recent weeks is authority for the statement that nowhere has he seen better crop prospects than in this part of Ohio, and particularly in Fayette County.

Most of you know that Fayette County is one of the outstanding farming spots of the nation, and has a type of soil which responds promptly to proper cultivation and fertilization.

The man stated that nowhere has he seen crops further advanced in this part of the nation than in Fayette County.

In his travels, he saw vast acreages of thin soil, where the underlying rock strata was so near the surface that crops had little opportunity of obtaining roothold sufficient for full maturity.

This reminds me that a few days ago while I was traveling in Canada, and remarked about the thin soil in so many places in that part of Canada, a man well versed in such affairs said:

"The glaciers scooped off all of our good top soil and much of the earth down to bedrock, and carried it down across the Great Lakes into the United States. That is why you have your rich corn belt and where you can grow crops generally."

I was aware of the fact that much of the soil in this area, for instance, at one time was part of Canada.

In northwestern Ohio, where the area was hilly before the glaciers moved down upon it, the hills were leveled off and valleys filled with silt and soil to the depth of 100 to 300 feet.

In this area the glacier treated the community kindly by first scraping off the earth to bedrock, and then depositing a considerable depth of earth on top of the bedrock.

Gov. Herbert To Visit Fair

Governor Thomas J. Herbert has announced from his office in Columbus that he will attend the Fayette County Fair Friday night. It is expected that he will speak briefly before the grandstand while here.

Gov. Herbert has accepted several invitations to attend fairs, including Knox County on Thursday and Lawrence County Wednesday.

Car Just Missed By Falling Tree

NEWARK, July 28—(AP)—Five passengers in an automobile were a split second from death or serious injury last night.

A huge tree smashed the front of the car when it fell across Route 16 during a thunder storm. Sheriff's deputy Leonard Helmick who investigated said, the occupants probably would have been killed had the tree fallen a "split second later."

In the car were William J. Boylan, 25, of Newark, and four members of his family.

VIP Kitten

Trip to New Home Is Made by Plane

KANSAS CITY, July 28—(AP)—Little Eva, the flying kitten, found a new playmate today—a dog named Topsy.

The six-week-old kitten arrived here by plane from Columbus, Ohio. It received the airplane ride mainly because of a broken leg suffered a couple of weeks back.

Miss Ruth Gosnell found the injured animal near Chillicothe, Ohio, and nursed it back to health. Her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Gosnell of Kansas City visited their niece in Columbus and fell in love with the kitten. After they returned here, Miss Gosnell decided to air express the animal to them.

The kitten arrived last night. Said Mrs. Gosnell: "She's a happy kitten now. We named her 'Little Eva' because our dog is named 'Topsy.' They like each other fine."

Ohio Democrats Plan Convention

COLUMBUS, July 28—(AP)—The Democratic party's state convention to draft a platform and name presidential electors will be held sometime in September, State Democratic Chairman Eugene H. Hanhart indicated yesterday.

He said he would call a meeting of the state central committee within two weeks to set the date. The Republican convention will be held Sept. 23.

The chairman said he had told Charles H. Hubbell there was nothing he could do about Hubbell's offer to withdraw as candidate for the Jan. 1 term of the Ohio Supreme Court on condition that Ray T. Miller of Cleveland be given the nomination.

BY JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, July 28—(P)—Don't expect the Republican-controlled Congress to do much that President Truman recommended. He's offered Congress an 11-point program on things he says need to be done for the country's welfare.

They range from what he considers way for controlling inflation and providing housing to voting a $65,000,000 loan to build a home for the United Nations in New York.

Of all his recommendations, the one that probably stands the best chance of being carried out is the $65,000,000 UN loan.

The Republicans are burned up at him.

Here at the beginning of the political campaigns, with elections coming up in November, he's called the Republican-controlled Congress back into special session.

Since he says his program is what the country needs, this puts the Congress on the spot of doing what he says or not doing it—but if it doesn't do it, the Republicans will have to explain why to the voters.

One important Republican congressman—he doesn't want his name mentioned—said:

"Look at what the president's doing. He comes up before a special session of Congress. He called the session. And we have to sit and listen to him make a speech.

"It's a campaign speech. And he makes it in front of the television cameras and over the radio.

"What a political platform that is. And at our expense. This talk to Congress is a wonderful opening for his own campaign for re-election."

The main point of Mr. Truman's message to Congress was the cost of living.

And it is that problem of the cost of living—it's now at its highest level in American history—which is causing the Republicans the most concern.

If they do nothing to control it at this special session—and if prices continue to rise between now and November's elections—it probably will cost them votes.

The same Republican said on this point:

But how are you going to pass a law at this time to cut down prices?"

He didn't go into the problem of trying to keep prices from going higher than they are now.

But he said hopefully: "I think prices will start to come down by November."

The Republican high command in Congress—in House and Senate—hasn't said publicly what it intends to do about Mr. Truman's program, and doesn't intend to say until it has had a chance to examine the message and talk it over. But the mood of the Republicans—or at least some of them—was shown pretty well when Congress re-opened Monday.

Rep. Frederick C. Smith, Ohio Republican, said that as soon as Mr. Truman delivered his message Congress ought to quit for the year.

In fact, Smith introduced a resolution to adjourn right after Mr. Truman's talk. Before that could happen both houses of Congress

Leesburg May Have College Classes Soon

Evening college classes will be opened in Leesburg by Wilmington College in September, if there is sufficient demand for them, it was announced this week, by Dr. Samuel D. Marble, president.

Plans call for at least five complete classes, which will be taught by regular members of the college faculty. Hours earned will be fully accredited.

Dr. Samuel D. Marble

The plan to hold evening classes is in line with the policy of Dr. Marble to give the utmost in service to the section of Ohio in which the college is located. Leesburg was chosen as the site, because of its central or "hub" location of an area comprising Hillsboro, Greenfield, Sabina, New Vienna, Washington C. H. and surrounding area it was announced.

Dr. Marble pointed out that the proposed classes will make it possible for young people to build up credits on a college education while being gainfully employed. It will also provide a means whereby teachers may earn extra college credits while regularly employed in the class rooms.

Whether or not such a school is opened depends entirely upon the demand. Coupons are being printed in ads in this issue as in other papers in this section. Prospective students should mail the coupons at once.

Grain Market Remains Calm During Turmoil

Situation Unusual By Comparison With Fluxuation Year Ago

By WILLIAM FERRIS

Chicago, July 28—(P)—"You aren't talking about me" might well be the statement of the grain market today to the uproar over inflation.

In the current upward price surge the grain market has been the good boy sitting quietly in the corner, minding his corn and oats, while the other markets put on their jitterbug act. It's all most unusual.

The contrast with nine months ago is startling. Then, grains raced higher with the nerve of a two-year-old exploring a glassware shop. Paternal reprimands came from President Truman and Congress, each harrassed and each blaming the other for the child's abandon.

Today, corn and oats futures on the Chicago board of trade are at their lowest prices of the year. They are even lower than at the bottom of the spectacular price break last February.

Wheat is not as low as last

February, but grain men generally believe it would be if the government's price supporting loan did not prop it up. Prices have held for the past few weeks right around this loan level.

Grain prices never really recovered from the mid-winter break. They got back some of the lost ground, but did not reach former peaks. They have slipped down again.

As an example, September corn made its high at $2.41½. In the February price break it fell to $1.73¾. Yesterday it closed at $1.71¾. Against a seasonal high of 99¼ September oats made a low of 76¼ in February and closed yesterday at 73½.

September wheat's seasonal high was $2.67. Its low in February was $2.12¼. Its close yesterday was $2.29¾. This contract derives support from the fact that the government loan in Chicago is $2.29 for No. 1 hard wheat in the cash market.

Statistics have made a good boy out of the grain market. For example, the wheat carryover this July 1 was 195,000,000 bushels against only 83,000,000 a year earlier. There was time nine months ago when it was thought the carry-over might be lower this year.

Weather has helped to whip some manners into the child. For example, a big harvest of oats is nearing completion and the conviction grows daily that this autumn's corn crop will be the largest in the world's history. It's very sobering.

So, when the president and Congress start talking about inflation today, they aren't talking about the grain market. He's that quiet fellow who looks so shocked at what the others are doing.

Nurses Are Much Needed Here and Elsewhere

There are many Washington C. H. and Fayette County girls who could do far worse for themselves in planning future careers than to take up the profession of nursing.

Shortage in the nursing field is felt keenly all over the country. Here in this community the Fayette County health department has been experiencing all kinds of difficulty in securing a sufficient number of nurses to handle its work completely as planned.

The lack of trained nurses plagues hospitals and causes all kinds of worries in the field of health. Post-war normalcy has been attained in most feminine careers but not in the field of nursing.

Three hazards continue to undermine nursing—low pay, lack of professional prestige, and Dan Cupid. Medical reports indicate that the national average pay of general duty nurses is from $170 to $180 per month. Many girls of far less training and education go considerably above this figure in numerous other kinds of work and yet there are few who are doing as much good or giving as much actual public service as are competent nurses.

It is argued that many civilian hospitals could well plan to give nurses higher standing by following some practice similar to the army and navy which have been ranking nurses as commissioned officers. Instead there are many instances where nurses are regarded without the dignity such as a doctor or other professional type enjoys. Some people seem to regard them, one observer states, as "semi-educated domestic or automatic instrument dispensers". In some hospitals part of this difficulty arises from high institutional operating costs coupled with increased patronage demands and lack of other help. In some places nurses, because of these conditions are forced to assume various menial tasks along with bedside care.

There are few nurses however, who are not proud of their profession. They know they are giving a service far beyond that given by many better paid individuals. Recent statistics show that of the 90,000 nurses-in-training in an average year, 30 percent drop out before diploma time, mostly for marriage. Many of the estimated 300,000 graduates annually in service are lost to the profession through marriage each year. It seems that a nurse is a good candidate for matrimony.

Nursing care is essential here at home in the local field as well as in the national field of activities. How to fill the ranks of trained nurses and keep them filled has become a serious question.

Just Progressive Geography

By Hal Boyle

PHILADELPHIA, July 28—(AP)—Henry Wallace's Progressive Party will go down in history for at least one thing—it has learned the secret of the American treasury.

This secret is that a lot of little people can fork over more dough than a few big people.

The money that one reluctant millionaire will disgorge in a moment of private appeal for the salvation of the Democratic or Republican party is strictly limited.

But when Hank Wallace's fund-raiser hits the platform in front of 30,000 or more cheering partisans the pocketbook appeal is unlimited.

This experienced front man, William Gailmore, a ripe-mouthed, balding, radio voice of extreme unctiousness, begins with a plea for $1,000 contributions to the Progressive Party. He ends his monetary siege on the program by calling upon the ushers to gather in all the stray silver.

Aimee Semple McPherson or Father Divine had the same approach. They did it in the name of religion and heaven that had its pie in the sky.

The Progressive Party has changed the appeal from religion to politics. It calls out the dollars from the common people on a program that offers the hope of pie here and now.

By tapping the wallet of the ordinary man Henry Wallace has caught up with the treasury—which long has known that the working man can pay more than the multi-millionaire. There just happen to be a darn sight more working men in the world than there are multi-millionaires.

Wallace himself has no direct connection, physically, with such transitory considerations. He does not appear on the platform until the gilt and the felt has been collected and delivered.

Then he comes out and talks about issues instead of dollars. He says that if he were president political crisis with Russia over the scarlet blockade of Berlin wouldn't exit. He doesn't say why it wouldn't. He just says it wouldn't.

He said nothing about the $30,000, including the federal amusement tax, which his supporters paid to hear him in Shibe Park Saturday night.

He said nothing, as he stood on a boxing platform behind second base while a golden moon rose over the right field fence, about the $50,000 the crowd had pledged for the purchase of radio time before he arrived.

Wallace doesn't mention those things—and probably Aimee Semple McPherson didn't either.

He just shook the famous forelock out of his eyes, threw his head back for the cheers in a manner reminiscent but unequal to Franklin D. Roosevelt, and pitched again and again verbally for the century of the common man.

He talked of peace and plenty, conciliation of Russia, and banged the Wall Street scoundrels off the backboard.

But politicians always have talked of peace and plenty and hit the sawdust trail of accusation against Wall Street.

What they will be amazed at Wallace for is this—that he got thousands of voters to pay money to hear him make an election speech.

It will remain a thing of awe to professional politicians that people paid out of their own hard cash to see a man baptize his own party. This was something new.

Maybe Congress would get a better House by charging an admission fee, too.

President vs Congress Scrap

By George E. Sokolsky

The powers of the president of the United States are enormous. Although the authors of the Constitution sought to limit those powers by various checks and balances, the authority of the president has, in 161 years, expanded until he can, if he desires, be the most powerful ruler in the world. This expansion has been accelerated by two wars and a series of emergencies between.

Heretofore, presidents have restrained themselves in the use of their powers, recognizing the spirit of our system, which is basically that the policy of government is determined by the Congress, while the administration is in the hands of the president. Not one of them, not even Franklin D. Roosevelt, ever used all his powers to promote his personal political fortunes. Roosevelt ran four times, but during his campaigns he only occasionally forgot that at such a time he was a candidate as well as a president.

Harry Truman has called the present special session of Congress only for the purpose of embarrassing his opponent, Thomas E. Dewey. Obviously, Dewey cannot control the 80th Congress, which is only adequately Republican in the House of Representatives. In the Senate, the Republicans have only a nominal majority for organizational purposes. Actually, that majority often sank to so low a figure that Republican leadership had to depend on Democrats to put their program through. Until Dewey is elected president, his influence over even the Republican members of Congress must be indirect.

As a matter of practice, no party ever controls either house of Congress unless it can pass measures over the president's veto. Every bill that was passed over Harry Truman's veto was passed by a large quota of Democratic votes. Harry Truman knows that, just as Herbert Hoover knew how weak the presidency can be with a president of one party and a Congress of another.

Yet, Truman has devoted himself to the denunciation of the 80th Congress as the worst in American history, which is silly to anyone who ever read any American history, which Harry Truman may never have done. At any rate, he has reconvocted this "worst Congress" to do what it has refused to do for two years, namely, to carry through Harry Truman's omnibus program, which can wreck the economy of the United States. In a word, he convokes "the worst" Congress to carry out his worst program.

Neither Truman nor any of his advisers want Congress to pass his program. They would not know what to do with such a program or where to get the money to carry it through or how to administer it. It is simply a public relations program, designed to satisfy every pressure group but not to serve America.

Yet, it has tremendous nuisance value. Neither the Democratic nor the Republican party is prepared to tell the pressure groups to be damned. They, therefore, play on the fringes of the impossible. So Harry Truman throws the book at them and demands that they go ahead full steam. If they don't he will accuse them of betraying the interests of each special group—Negroes, veterans, farmers, labor leaders, Zionists, anti-Zionists, anyone you can think of. If they do, conditions will become unstable and he will accuse the 80th Congress of ruining the United States. Either way, he will put the responsibility on Tom Dewey, who, having no direct power until he is elected, cannot lawfully do anything either legislatively or administratively.

So that is the trick and a cheap, snide one it is. Nothing beneficial for the country will be accomplished by it. In fact, in the face of a world crisis, a general election places heavy spiritual burdens upon the country and makes the conduct of administration difficult. Truman at such a time divides the country, angers large segments of its people, creates emotional disturbances and all for the purpose of partisan politics. No other president has heretofore made the abuse of Congress his principal weapon.

Truman is driven to this course by his fear of Henry Wallace, who has become a ghastly complex in his life. If Wallace has done this country no other harm, he has wrought havoc in his psychological effect upon its president.

Bronchial Asthma Difficult to Cure

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SINCE permanent cures are rare in cases of bronchial asthma, the patient with this disorder must learn to live with it as best he can hoping that something of worth will be discovered in the meantime. The aim of the doctor will be to give every possible aid in the way of relieving and preventing attacks.

Asthma occurs in periodic attacks, during which the patient finds breathing extremely difficult. The wheezing and coughing which accompany the shortness of breath are very trying, both to the patient and those who must care for him.

Due to Allergy

Many cases of asthma are undoubtedly due to allergy; thus it would seem that complete cures could be obtained by the discovery of the substance to which the patient is sensitive. Yet, experience shows that even where this search is successful and the patient is taken out of contact with the offending substance, improvement is often no more than temporary.

Since this is true, it is fortunate that a number of measures are available for relieving the attacks. Where the seizure is mild, it may be treated successfully by having the patient breathe a fine vapor containing a mixture of adrenaline, papaverine and atropine. Of course, the proper preparation must be prescribed by the physician. The vapor is breathed in over a period of several minutes, and then for at least two minutes longer than the time when the patient gets relief. It is also recommended that the patient take ephedrine by mouth at the same time since the effect of the ephedrine will not develop for about an hour.

In a more severe attack, the ephedrine is of little value. In such cases, the adrenaline is given by injection under the skin. A sufficiently large dose must be used, and it is advised that it be divided up and given in different parts of the skin so that more rapid absorption will take place.

In some instances, aminophylline, given by injection into a vein, relieves the attack when the adrenaline is not successful.

The prevention of attacks is also important. Under the direction of his physician, the patient can learn to cut short an attack at the very beginning, thus avoiding a severe seizure. If he carries an inhaler with him, he is always prepared to breathe in an attack-routting drug mixture at the slightest sign of a wheeze. It may also be helpful to take ephedrine in advance if the patient knows about what time of the day an attack may be expected.

Breathing exercises to deflate the chest and bring the abdominal muscles into action are useful if properly employed. The exercises must be carried out slowly under the doctor's direction.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

V. B.: What is glandular fever?

Answer: This disorder is also known as infectious mononucleosis.

Glandular fever is a condition in which there are enlarged lymph glands in the neck and an increase in the white blood cells in the blood, particularly the lymphocytes.

The condition is due to an infection. There are rarely any complications, and it disappears, as a rule, within ten days.

Treatment consists of complete rest in bed, the giving of a moderate diet and plenty of fluids, and such drugs as the physician may prescribe for the relief of the fever and other symptoms.

Prison Term Faced By Cleveland Cop

CLEVELAND, July 28—(AP)—Fired Police Lieutenant Ernest L. Molnar today faced a possible prison sentence of one to 80 years for accepting $80,000 in bribes from convicted policy racketeers.

Molnar was found guilty last night on all eight counts of a bribery indictment, but Mayor Thomas A. Burke declared "other phases" of the city's investigation of bribes would be announced later.

He asserted he and the safety department headed by Director William Smith "have known for some time that a few members of the police department warranted scrutiny, and I want to emphasize that we have been, and are, doing something about that."

That Ideal Vacation!

Washington C. H. Mailmen Wouldn't Walk; Most Would Like To Go to Far-Away Places

Whoever said a mailman would take a walk if he had a vacation? If that's true in other communities, then the Washington C. H. mail carriers are individualists. They each have their own ideas of where to go and what to do.

Under the pleasant, but decidedly false, assumption that this year they could take a month off with money as no object, the city and rural carriers here named such places as Miami Beach, Florida; Lake Erie; California; Denver, Colo.; Phoenix, Ariz. and Alaska as some of their destinations for a perfect vacation.

If Charles V. Sexton could have his way, his would be a busy month. He has always wanted to tour the United States and see everything of interest and he would like nothing better than to use his mythical month in that way.

Roy Purcell has proved that gallantry is still very much alive. He said he would be happy to use his dream month carrying out his wife's longtime desire to visit the state of Michigan. He did admit he is very fond of conventions and if there were a Letter Carrier's convention at that time Mrs. Purcell would no doubt reciprocate and urge him to attend.

Roy Thompson would like nothing better than to visit his son in Denver, Colorado.

Carl Meriweather said he'd divide his time by spending two weeks at a cottage on Lake Erie with his family, journeying to Chicago to see the Railroad Fair and resting at home for one week.

More Buyers for Farms Here Now Than There Are Farms for Sale

There are more buyers for Fayette County farms now than there are farms for sale.

That is the consensus of real estate agents in Washington C. H. However, they hasten to add there is more to the present condition than mere supply and demand.

First of all, they are convinced more people have more money than for a long time; and that they consider farm land a sound investment—if the price is right.

And, that's where the rub comes in. The buyers, numerous though they are, hesitate to pay the prices asked.

On the farm owners side, real estate men say farmers reason that farming is their business, they are making money farming now and they can find no place where they can invest their money to better advantage.

Besides, the land is home to the farmer—he has a sentimental attachment to it.

No 'Average' Price
One real estate dealer said "it's hard to find a good farm in Fayette County for less than $200 an acre."

That was his answer when asked what the average price of farm land here is now.

"There is no average," he said and added "it all depends on how bad the buyer wants it and how willing the farmer is to give up his land."

Most of the real estate men expressed the belief that there is comparatively little speculative farm buying here now.

As an example of the unusual factors in the business of buying and selling farms, one dealer said an offer of $45,000 for 104 acres—that is more than $400 a acre—had been turned down flat by the owner-farmer.

"It was his home, it was where he was making a good living and he just did not want to part with it," was the explanation of the farmer's position.

Two Fools Meet
The dealer said that when the offer was made the third time the farmer merely said: "Just tell your buyer this is where two fools met."

"Apparently the farmer realized," the real estate men said, "that he was turning down an offer of more than his farm was worth and was satisfied."

The buyer, the agent said, liked the home and buildings and location and was willing to pay what he realized was more than its sound value.

That, however, was an exception in the extreme, but illustrates one of the dominant influences in the farm market here.

There are plenty buyers—buyers with money—but there still is a slight gap in price separating them from the owners in closing many purchases.

None of the real estate agents would venture a prediction on the future.

Use A Yardstick

The Agriculture department has some words of caution for the man who is thinking of buying farm land at current prices.

In more than half the states, farm land values now top the boom time peaks of 1920 and are the highest on record. For all states, they average around 1920 levels.

These factors should lead prospective farm buyers to "take a second look" before buying, says Harold C. Larsen of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in a written analysis of land prices.

In fact, Larsen offers a formula or that "second look." It is a means of measuring whether a man can really afford to buy farm land in spite of prices.

Here's how it works:

If a man has money to invest, he should first figure what rate of interest he would want in the event he put it to some other use than land investment. For example, he might loan the money to a farmer on a farm mortgage at five per cent interest.

But buying a farm is riskier than lending on a mortgage, which usually represents only about 50 per cent on the value of the mortgaged property. Thus the farm buyer might want another one per cent interest on his money.

If no additional risks were in the picture, the prospective buyer could therefore figure he ought to get about a six per cent return on his investment in farm land.

Next the man must estimate as accurately as possible what future net income he may expect from the land he wants to buy. He may guess that crop prospects and market prices indicate a net return of $10 an acre.

If $10 is the income per acre he can expect, and he wants six per cent on his money, then the $10 is six per cent of the value or price he can afford for farm land. In this case, it would be $166 an acre.

Should the buyer want seven per cent, he could afford to pay only $143 an acre.

Larsen cautions that in periods of inflation buyers of land usually are unduly optimistic in guessing future income trends.

Using an interest rate just one per cent above average mortgage rates, net income from land for the next 10 years would have to stay at 1946 levels—three times higher than the 1935-39 average—to justify current land values.

Warns Larsen:

"In the past, farm costs have tended to catch up with farm income during periods of inflation and net incomes were reduced even though prices received for farm commodities stayed high. Many farmers are already experiencing some difficulties from this squeeze.

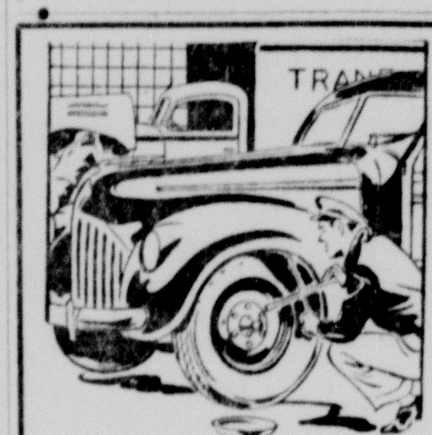

"When the downturn comes, further more, costs are likely to drop more slowly than the prices of farm products. Under such conditions, farmers' net incomes are likely to shrink faster than their gross receipts.

"Obviously, the closer we come to the time when incomes will decline, the less favorable it becomes to buy land."

Run-Away Alligator Is Back in Own Yard

Harry Todd's run-away alligator is back in his own back yard after a week's exploration trip.

Jerry Speakman found the errant reptile sunning itself on the side of a lily pool in the back yard of his home on Elm Street—about two blocks from the pool in the back yard of Todd's home on South Fayette Street.

Whether the alligator had been there most of the time since he left his own home probably never will be known. Jerry's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Speakman, think he has been there for several days at least.

The pool is about 50 feet from the Speakman back door. Jerry and the neighbor boys have been playing around the pool day after day, but they never saw the alligator until Tuesday.

Jerry's father said he had an inkling the night before when he heard the water in the pool being churned. He had put a big frog in it not long before. He thinks that was the end of the frog.

When Jerry spied the alligator sunning himself on the side of the pool, he ran across the lots to tell Mrs. Todd. She called her husband. Meanwhile, Jerry had told his mother and she had called her husband.

They all converged on the lily pool. The alligator was not disturbed in the least. Todd grabbed it by the tail with one hand and behind its head with the other and carried it back to its own home writhing violently at times.

The alligator, now more than three feet long, was one of six sent Todd from Florida by Elliot Kaufman six years ago. They were

Big D P&L Model Is Fair Exhibit

A gigantic model of The Dayton Power and Light Company's new O. H. Hutchings electric generating station is one of the feature attractions at the D P & L exhibit at the Fair this week. The huge model is 12 feet long, 10 feet wide, and weighs more than 2½ tons.

The model of D P & L's new $15,000,000 generating station is the largest and most complete model of an electric generating station ever built by the Stanley Chamberlain Co. of New York City. Scale of the model is one-eighth inch to 12 inches, with the terrain shown in relief.

The model shows the modernistically designed generating station, the Miami River with its new dam, the water intake and discharge canal, a private railroad, water tower, modern coal handling equipment, gigantic sub-stations and high voltage transmission lines.

The first 60,000 kilowatt unit of the O. H. Hutchings Station, located south of Miamisburg, is now in operation. Another 60,000 kilowatt generating unit will be added by the first of next year. The station will eventually generate over 380,000 kilowatts.

Another feature of the D P & L exhibit is a display of new methods of hay making. There will be a large map of Fayette County showing the location of electric hay dryers in the county. There will also be photos of the installations shown on the map and samples of electrically dried hay.

A qualified agricultural engineer will be on hand to explain the many new developments in hay-making.

The Dayton Power and Light Company is sponsoring a 4-H

Club home demonstration contest and is awarding table model radios to the winners. The Fayette County Home Demonstration Agent will be in charge of judging the demonstrations.

Fruit Growers Have Two Days During August

Important Meetings Are Announced In This State

Fruit growers from Fayette and adjacent counties, as well as throughout Ohio, are invited by C. W. Ellenwood, secretary of the Ohio State Horticultural Society, to attend one or both of the meetings to be held August 18 and 19.

The summer meeting on August 18 is to be at the Price Orchard, four miles northwest of Newark, will be at the Ohio Experiment Station, Wooster.

The first tour at the Price Orchard will start at 9:30 A. M. Eastern Standard time. There are 100 acres to be inspected, with apples and peaches the main crops. The land under the Orchard has been owned by the Price family for 125 years, and the present orchard was established by Tom Price and his father H. C. Price.

Orchard management but nothing in equipment and management has been spared to bring the trees into the high state of productivity they now show. A large exhibit of orchard machinery and equipment will be displayed. The Orchard has a new refrigerated storage, and modern grading equipment is used to prepare the fruit for market.

Speakers at Newark will be Mrs. H. C. Price and John A. Hall, Lockport, New York. The speakers at Wooster, August 19 will be Alex Laurie and Wilbur Gould, Ohio State University, who have some new slants on processing fruit. Fruit growers can get help on insect and disease problems by taking specimens to be identified at clinics to be held at Wooster.

Secretary Ellenwood reports Ohio's 1948 apple crop to be light but its quality good, with total production for the state under 2,000,000 bushels. The peach crop is spotty, some orchards having a good crop and other orchards none. Ohio growers have had another difficult year in controlling apple scab.

New Tilt-a-Whirl put in operation by Gooding Co. for first time at Fayette County Fair brings laughs and thrills. Mother and daughter in picture above are living symbols of hilarity.

Saturday is to be a big day at the Fair for the youngsters.

The board of directors has dedicated it to boys and girls under 12 years of age.

They are to be guests of the board—no admission at the gate—until 6 P. M. Special programs of entertainment have been worked out, and they may ride any of the shows on Midway for nine cents.

Uniformed guides are to be on the grounds to direct the children. Final arrangements for the gala day for the kiddies have just been completed by board representatives and O. Buck Saunders, general representative of the F. E. Gooding Amusement Co., which set up the rides and shows.

Saunders, whose home is in Washington C. H., had a hand in arranging for two brand new rides and one new show being unveiled here.

The tilt-a-whirl, Saunders said, was set up here for the first time. Also new and making its first Midway stand are the Tiny Tot Speed Boats, which are a sensation among the small fry.

The new show is the Fun House. Other entertainments include Jimmy Winslow's African lion show; Sayer's Motordrome, where the audience frequently looks the other way when Sayer rides upside-down; the snake show presented by Mr. and Mrs. Tracey, two little people less than 3½ feet tall who are such clever entertainers they really don't need the snakes and Maple's Glass Show, where glass-blowing artists fashion delicate objects from molten glass.

Saunders, whose business is arranging carnival entertainment, described the Midway at the Fair here as "packed with clean wholesome entertainment." He expressed the hope that parents would take advantage of the Fair Board's "bargain day" Saturday by taking or sending their children out early.

Saunders was enthusiastic about the Fair here this year—and he has seen them all and had a hand in building up the Midway in most of them.

There are many shows and rides on the Midway. But that is only one segment of the Fair.

There are more displays in the agricultural departments, bigger merchant exhibits, a more extensive layout of farm equipment and a greater variety of unique small features than ever before, members of the board say.

Starting Wednesday, four afternoons have full programs of harness racing.

FARMING IS LIKE

... Banking ...

No bank can keep its doors open long if the withdrawals exceed the deposits. Just so, no farm land can remain productive and profitable when, over an extended period, the withdrawals and losses of the various plant-food elements exceed the replacements.

Of the six most important plant foods—nitrogen, phosphorus, potash, sulphur, calcium, and magnesium—the loss of lime (calcium and magnesium) far exceeds the loss of any of the others. Each year cropping, erosion, and leaching remove from each acre the equivalent of from 200 to 500 pounds of limestone.

Keep the lime account of your farm in balance by using our agricultural limestone.

Another Victory For Universals

Bakers Forfeit To New Hollanders

The Pennington Bakers didn't show up Tuesday night and as a result forfeited their game to Drake's Produce team from New Holland. The fans who showed up weren't disappointed, however, as a "pick-up" team was assembled and gave the Drake boys a battle.

In the six innings that were played, Drake's scored one run on five hits while the pick-ups were held scoreless and hitless by George, Drake's pitcher.

Drake's only run came in the first inning and was scored by Reynolds' the third baseman.

Hobbs, on the mound for Universal, allowed only two hits, while O'Brien and Colwell, who shared the pitching duties for Armbrusts allowed 16 hits.

Universal scored eight runs in the second inning, two in the third and another seven in the fifth to chalk up the decisive win.

Ivan Kelley, Universal's third baseman, led the hitting with three hits in four times at bat.

1947 Champs Pace Softball Loop

The Universal Auto Co. softball team that won the championship of the Recreation League last year, today was well on the way to a repeat performance this season with a lock already snapped shut on the first half of the 1948 schedule.

With only one or two exceptions, the boys who won the title last year are carrying on in the same uniforms this year. Here they posed for a picture in front of the Universal Auto Co. (note banner name on building in background) at Fayette and Market streets.

Cast-offs Factor in Braves' Climbing

By JOE REICHLER

(By the Associated Press)

Billy Southworth, Boston Braves' manager continues to have amazing success with cast-offs.

Southworth's latest "find" is Nelson Potter, the veteran right-hander he picked up a month ago as a free agent after the latter was fired by Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Potter, thus joins those who have made fine comebacks under the expert guidance of Southworth.

Potter who won his first start against Pittsburgh, got his second last night and again came through with a well-pitched game. This time the American League discard permitted the Pirates only six hits in defeating them 5-1 in Boston. He did not allow a run after Ralph Kiner tagged him for his 28th home run in the first inning. He did not issue a single base on balls and struck out four including Kiner in the ninth inning.

Braves Widen Gap

The victory in the opener of a 20-game home stand enabled the Braves to widen their first place margin over the rest of the field to five and a half games.

Boston's other Major League entry, Joe McCarthy's rampaging Red Sox, extended their winning streak to 13 straight games by blanking the Tigers in Detroit. Hal Newhouse, Detroit's ace southpaw, was the victim.

South's triumph together with the Indians' 10-5 victory over the Athletics in Cleveland, gave the Red Sox a full-game lead in the tight American League pennant race. Although the Indians trail by a game and a half to Philadelphia's one, they took over second place from the A's through a mathematical oddity. The A's, with four more victories and three more defeats than points behind the tribe.

The Brooklyn Dodgers replaced the St. Louis Cardinals in the runner-up spot in the National League by coming from behind with two runs in the ninth to nip the Redbirds in Brooklyn in the only game played in daylight.

Reds Shut Out

Larry Jensen turned in his second straight shutout and 13th victory of the season as he pitched the New York Giants to a 3-0 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

The victory moved the Giants into the first division, a half game ahead of the Pirates, and one game behind the Cardinals.
A crowd of 54,609 Detroit fans saw the Red Sox snap Newhouse's five-game winning streak by knocking him out with five runs in three innings. Johnny Pesky and Bobby Doerr did the heavy stickwork. Kinder had a no-hitter until Johnny Lipon doubled with Cliff Fannin held the Yankees to three hits in gaining his seventh victory. Arft had arrived yesterday from Toledo to take over the regular first base duties.

Pat Seerley walloped his 14th home run with Luke Appling on base and two out in the last of the ninth to give the Chicago White Sox a 2-1 triumph over the Washington Senators.

Bob Scheffing's pinch single scored Clarence Madden with the run in the 11th inning that gave the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over Dutch Leonard and the Phils in Philadelphia. The hit spoiled Eddie Sawyer's debut as Philly manager.

British Youth Losing Faith

Future Is Viewed With Uncertainty

London, July 28.—(P)—Field Marshal Lord Montgomery diagnoses the present feeling of British youth as "spiritual malaise."

"Uncertainty, ignorance and fear are widespread among young people," he told a meeting of young parents, organized by the mothers' union.

"This is a disease of morale," he said. "It is a sickness of our national character and must be treated as such."

"I consider that we older people have two main tasks: First, to devote the remaining years of our lives to such work as will tend to make years less frequent, secondly, to so train the younger generation that they will be able to handle the things that lie ahead."

Montgomery sees youth as inclined to be intolerant and critical of its elders, observing there had been two major wars in modern times, "both of them probably brought on by unpreparedness and, after each of them, a total failure to realize the benefits which it was promised that victory would bring."

"The young are suffering from a profound feeling not of insecurity but of what, for want of a better word, I call uncertainty. This feeling robs them of the spirit of adventure and perhaps of their self-confidence."

"I think the absence of faith, combined with the menacing pressure of world events which seem too vast to be comprehended, may have disastrous results unless we are very careful."

"If this is a fair picture of the young generation of today, it is a sad reflection on the generation that went before it."

Montgomery believes "the first and most important place where the cure must begin is in the family... the woman's job of laying the foundations of faith, character and morale in the home is the foundation on which our whole national structure rests."

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT

THE ROLLS were superlative (being Emma Potts' rolls, they were bound to be), the corn relish disappeared in astonishing amounts, the coffee was piping hot, and the pancakes—! Andrew ran out of adjectives when it came to the pancakes. It may have been the frosty air of the evening, it may have been because Joan made them, or because they were slathered with the Woodford butter and soaked in pools of luscious New Hampshire maple syrup. Whatever the reason, they were the most ambrosial food he had ever eaten.

There wasn't much appetite left for the ice cream and cake, but most of it disappeared, anyhow. Ellery was a great help there. And with satiety came an unaccustomed silence. They sat on the porch, and Andrew and Joan, and a few choosy souls like the Woodfords and Millie Sayre had brought camp-chairs. But they all faced the fire, and they were all smiling.

"Well," it was Ogden Sayre who broke the silence, "what comes after this, Andy?"

"Mrs. Woodford's mints," he said.

Everyone laughed. "You know what I mean," Sayre chided him. "After this, he waved his hand—'what do you plan to do?'"

Andrew sighed happily. "Well," he answered, bending forward to catch the warmth of the fire on his face, his hands clasped loosely between his knees, "I'll go back to what I had started, I suppose. Hunting over old houses and making them over and selling them to world-weary cosmopolitans like yourself. I've got the option on one near Lisbon that will work up very well, I believe. And then there may be some hardy creatures who will employ me to build their summer places—I'll find something."

Sayre chuckled. "I wasn't doubting that. Your lazy streak, if you have one, which I doubt, is certainly negligible. I was asking because I have a piece of land on the outskirts of the Moriches, on Long Island. I've thought for a long time that I ought to do something about it, but I wasn't sure just what until I saw this house of yours, and your plans for the rest of the development. Now I think I have it. Would you like to come down there sometime this winter and look it over, and give me your ideas?"

Andrew was inordinately pleased. "Of course I would. I know the general territory there. There are some lovely old houses. You'd probably want something in keeping, is that it?"

"Yes, the kind that could be used for summer or all year-round, I think. We'll go into all that later. But I'm glad to know you'll come... By the way, I've had the woodpile built up so you won't freeze this winter, and I've got a man who'll put the storm-sash on for you before we leave next week."

Andrew was touched. He had been looking forward to the time when he would move back into the Wheeler house—half with pleasure at the thought of living there again, half with sorrow that the Sayres would be gone.

Mrs. Woodford made the first move to go. "Huntley, it's time we rediscovered our own fireside. This has been charming, Andrew, simply charming! I don't know when I have had a better supper. And it was delightful to see the house; we appreciate the invitation more than we can say, don't we, Huntley? You know, you are a real addition to Branfield! We're proud of you!"

It might have sounded forced and gushing coming from anyone else, but when Mrs. Woodford said it, Andrew knew that he had indeed been honored. He helped her gather her innumerable wraps, her catch-all bag, and the new bifocals which she had discarded "because they bothered her." They were mislaid, of course, and in finding them the whole party began to break up.

Andrew was very much the busy host for the next ten minutes until everyone and everything had been stowed in the proper place. When he had escorted Mrs. McClure to the Priest car, and had made sure that the skillet and the pancake-makings were there, too, he said quietly, "I'll bring Joan along later."

She nodded, and her eyes rested on him fondly. "Goodnight, Andy," she said, "and good luck—with everything."

He knew what she meant and he went back to the dying fire and Joan's crouched figure with a lifted heart. "Don't bother with it any more," he said, pulling her to her feet and linking her arm in his. "I want you to go over the house with me once again—I have a flashlight, so it will be safe enough—and give me some pointers for the next one."

She came with him, laughing. "But I haven't any pointers, Andy," she said. "I think you've done a beautiful job."

"Lives there a woman who can go through a house and not find something that should be different?" he asked incredulously. "Echo answers NO!"

It was true enough. When they reached the second floor, she said, "I don't think there's quite enough closet room, Andy. Not for linens and blankets, and things like that. Because, you see, in a cold climate like this, you have to have a lot of them, and plenty of room to store them. How about using the space under the eaves?"

"Suggestion number one," he said. "A good one. Keep right on."

"Well," she said hesitantly, as if afraid to offend him, "there is something else... You have the bathroom between the bedrooms, with a door from it to each room."

"Yes. Is there something wrong with that?"

"No, of course not. But it might be more practical to have the bathroom door open on the hall. That cuts out one door, and gives you more wall space in your bathroom and in the bedrooms, too. Besides, it isn't always convenient to have the bath connect."

"I see what you mean," Andrew said seriously. "I'll remember that when we build our house."

"Yes, and, Andy, we could have an outdoor fireplace built right into our living room chimney, couldn't we, for parties like this?" It would be such a fun and we could—! She stopped in mid-sentence, the sound of her own words ringing in her ears.

Andrew laid the flashlight down, and turned her toward him. "Don't stop," he said softly. "I've been waiting for this for a long time."

But she shook her head. "She said, in a choked little voice. 'I—I forgot. You'll be working on Long Island. You'll probably not be coming back here.'"

He smiled down at her. "Long Island has no White Mountains."

"It has the sea." Her voice was positively mournful.

"There would be no friends," he told her.

"You'd make them... Besides, there would be the Sayres."

"And you wouldn't be there," he continued, as if she had not spoken.

She took a deep breath. "I—I could come with you."

"Joan, my darling!" His arms crushed her to him and he kissed the breath right out of her. "If you know how I've tried to make you say that! Do you mean it?"

"I've been meaning it for a long time, but I was too proud and too stubborn," she said when she could talk again.

"And I was too proud and too sure of myself." He laughed exultantly. "Oh, Joan, my dearest, we're going to be so happy."

"Yes," she said, with a serious little note in her voice. "I think we will be. We've both changed, Andy, and for the better, I hope. But I did have some awful growing pains. I'm big enough now, though, to be Mrs. Andrew Paulson."

She leaned her head against his shoulder. "It's going to be wonderful to be Mrs. Andrew Paulson," she added with a blissful sigh.

Andrew remembered suddenly that she knew nothing about him. That he had a great deal to disclose. But he knew now that he would be safe in the recounting of his story—she would no longer be alienated by it. He said, thoughtfully, "I have a lot to tell you, Joan."

She lifted her face to him, trusting him, confident. "What is it, Andy?"

He opened his mouth to begin, but what he said was, "I love you, Joan. I love you... I love you..."

Wilmington Couple Pays for Wild Ride

CINCINNATI, July 28.—(P)—William Williams, 29, of Wilmington, was fined $75 and given a 20-day jail sentence when he pleaded guilty last night to a charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of alcohol.

Mayor Carl Lindell, who heard the case, suspended the jail sentence, however, and remitted $25 of the fine. He also fined Williams $15 and costs after he pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving.

Marvel Williams, 30, wife of Williams, was fined $5 and costs on a charge of being found in a state of intoxication.

The Williams were arrested in Terrace Park, just outside the city limits of Cincinnati, on July 17 after being pursued by police Chief William Holtke. Mrs. Williams fell from the automobile and suffered head injuries. Holtke said Williams drove over an embankment and continued at high speed after losing one of the rear tires of his car.

The six granges of the county have interesting displays which show a great deal of careful work and thought. They are: Forest Shade, Madison Good Will, Good Hope, Fayette, Seldon and Marshall, with Forest Shade Juvenile Grange also showing an exhibit.

The corn exhibit, which overflowed the space allocated for it, and the fruit and vegetable exhibits are also on the same floor, along with the W. C. T. U. exhibit and Girl Scouts.

In a building east of the grandstand are the Farm Bureau Council exhibits, which, as usual reflect great skill and planning, and are well worth seeing.

DECISION GIVEN

Judge H. M. Rankin, in the case of Kenneth P. Mickle and others against Herman H. Frey and others, has handed down a decision dismissing both the petition of the plaintiffs and the cross petition of the defendants, and assessing the costs against the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs set forth in their petition that they had entered into a contract with the defendants, Nov. 14, 1945, for sale of half of 1.11 acres in Jefferson Township, for $850, payable $200 down and $10 monthly until the entire amount was paid and taxes paid, the contract providing that if terms of the contract were violated, the plaintiffs could void the contract.

It was further claimed that the defendants failed to meet certain monthly payments in 1948, after a total of $485 had been paid, and the plaintiffs sought to force defendants to surrender contract.

In a cross petition the defendants stated they had paid all but $365 of the total amount, and deposited this amount with the clerk of courts to pay the remainder, and also stated they had offered to pay the amount and the taxes to the plaintiffs.

The court found that only two payments had lapsed, and that the defendants, based on the evidence, were ready to pay not only the two installments but the entire amount, and that the plaintiffs had "rushed into court" without giving adequate opportunity to the defendants to pay.

Gas Situation Discussed By Speaker Here

DP&L Co.'s Industrial Engineer Addresses Rotary Club Meeting

The gas situation as it affects this locality and other parts of Ohio and other northern state areas, was the subject of an interesting and informative talk delivered before Rotarians and guests at the Country Club Tuesday noon by C. L. Gillum, industrial gas engineer for The Dayton Power and Light Company.

Gillum who was introduced by Max Lawrence told of the extensive program underway in the effort to bring more gas from the Texas field into the northern market and of the many delaying difficulties faced in completing such plans. It will probably be 1952 before sufficient additional gas lines will be in operation to enable gas distributors like The Dayton Power and Light Company to offer additional gas use and facilities to the public, he indicated.

Although there is a known supply of gas in the ground in gas fields, sufficient to afford an adequate supply for the next 40 years, Gillum said, the technical problems connected with getting huge pipe lines in operation to bring the gas north to meet a rapidly expanding demand, have proven exceedingly difficult. The Dayton Power and Light Company buys much of its gas from The Columbia Gas and Electric Company, a general distributor, and from such other sources where it can obtain it.

The heavily increasing market for gas since the war has been due to increased coal and oil prices while gas prices have not increased and in some places are slightly less than formerly, Gillum said. Building of pipe lines has been slowed up because of shortage of steel.

Gillum further declared that distributors of gas for northern states were hoping to be reasonably well caught up with necessary service by 1950 but hardly would be in position to push sale of more gas before 1952. Meantime residential demand must take precedence over industrial demands in Ohio, he stated.

The speaker said that approximately 70 percent of the gas used throughout this region comes from the Texas fields, another 15 to 20 percent from Louisiana and the remainder from other fields such as West Virginia and Ohio. During and since the war industrial uses for gas have been on the increase until today there are more than 20,000 uses for this product in the industrial field.

Following his talk Gillum threw the meeting open for questions and answered many.

Fred Pierson, director of the city's recreational program, appeared before the club and asked for donations toward a fund to be used to charter buses to send a large group of boys to Columbus next week to see the Columbus Red Birds of the American Association play one of their baseball games. Approximately $60 was raised and with donations Pierson will receive from other sources. He was confident the outing for the boys could be planned.

President John Abernethy announced that next week's Rotary program would be entirely different. He was somewhat mysterious as to just what the program would be but said it would be some type of variety show with local Rotary talent.

Recreation Groups Have Fair Exhibit

If you're among those Washington C. H. parents who have children participating in some of the city recreation activities and you've been wondering just what the kids do at the playgrounds, don't miss their exhibit at the Fair.

Pictures showing the kids in action plus a board showing some of their handiwork are on display in the Craig Bros. booth in the Merchants Building.

Fred Pierson, city recreation director, said that the exhibit will be of interest to everyone, even if you don't have children participating in the recreation program. The Craig Bros. booth is located in the center of the Merchants Building, opposite the photographic exhibit.

125 Respond to TB X-ray Unit

Additions Made To Staff at Fair

A good response to the mobile X-ray unit at the Fairgrounds Tuesday night was reported by Paul Strevey, secretary of the Fayette County Tuberculosis and Health Association.

One hundred and 25 people took advantage of the free X-ray survey for the detection of tuberculosis. C. M. Casey is field supervisor for the survey, Clarence W. Caldwell is its chief technician and W. T. Cassidy is technician.

Donald Wilmut, chief technician and Pat Flaherty, technician, have been added to the mobile unit's personnel.

Strevey pointed out that it takes little more than 30 seconds for each person to be X-rayed, and results of each person's survey are mailed to his family physician. Cards for these reports are made out by the Business and Professional Women's Club.

"Fayette Countians are urged to take advantage of this service," Strevey said. The unit is set up beside the secretary's office at the Fair.
